

COPILLOT COMEBACKS

100 HILARIOUS
WAYS TO SAY
NO TO SPAMMY
PITCHES

COPILLOT WITH DAVE'S SURVIVAL GUIDE FOR AFFILIATE LIFE

100 Hilarious Comebacks for Declining Unwanted Business Pitches

Copilot with Dave's Survival Guide for Affiliate Life

Intro: Why This Exists

If you've spent more than five minutes online, you've probably been hit with one of these:

- "Hey boss, want to join my amazing opportunity?"
- "I've got a ground-floor business that will change your life!"
- "All you need is a small monthly buy-in..."

Sound familiar? Yeah, me too.

This little guide is your armour — 100+ outrageous comebacks you can use to deflect MLM-style invitations, pushy "opportunities," or unsolicited sales pitches. Think of it as your cheat sheet for surviving the digital streets... while keeping your sense of humour intact.

Use them wisely. Or recklessly. Either way, don't blame me when Karen blocks you. 😂

The Comebacks

1. I'd join, but my schedule is already full of bad decisions. Gotta stay loyal.
2. Is this a business opportunity or a dare? Either way, I'm out.
3. I only join cults that come with a theme song and matching robes.
4. My therapist said I need fewer group chats, not more.
5. I don't chase dreams that require a monthly buy-in.
6. I respect your hustle, but I'm already emotionally invested in Netflix.
7. This opportunity sounds like it's powered by vibes and peer pressure.
8. I can't sell to friends — I need them to help me move furniture someday.
9. My last 'opportunity' turned into a very expensive group text.
10. If this offer was any more vague, it'd be a horoscope.

11. Does your compensation plan include therapy sessions? Asking for past me.
12. I'm already drowning in inboxes — please don't hand me a lifeboat shaped like a funnel.
13. I'm not built for the “grind set.” I'm more of a “nap set” kind of guy.
14. I thought about it. Then I thought again. Still no.
15. Your opportunity just got ghosted by my ambition.
16. I tried selling hope once. Turns out, it doesn't pay well.
17. My credit card declined your vibe.
18. I'm flattered, but I only join businesses with dragons or wizards.
19. I'm not saying it's a pyramid scheme, but the triangle energy is strong.
20. Is there a special prize for saying no the fastest?
21. This pitch makes my Wi-Fi want to disconnect itself.

22. Does the business come with a money-back guarantee on lost friendships?
23. Your enthusiasm is contagious. I just took a vaccine.
24. I already joined a club — it's called Boundaries Anonymous.
25. I'm allergic to vague promises and excessive emojis.
26. If I say yes, will you stop calling me 'boss'?
27. My vibe is more leave me alone than be your own CEO.
28. This sounds like a great opportunity for someone who doesn't have trust issues.
29. Sorry, I only make passive income from sarcasm and passive-aggressive notes.
30. Does this come with a handbook titled How to Lose Friends and Annoy People?
31. I'd rather arm wrestle a raccoon than sign up for one more webinar.

32. I'm not looking for a new opportunity — I'm still recovering from the last one.
33. If this opportunity were any more mysterious, it'd be a Scooby-Doo villain.
34. This smells like hustle culture with a side of Kool-Aid.
35. I already own stock in disappointment. I'm good.
36. I'd love to join, but I've just been accepted into Hogwarts.
37. I don't trust anything that uses the word freedom five times in one sentence.
38. My gut says no. My inbox says no. My soul says absolutely not.
39. I'm not a good fit — unless you need someone to question everything constantly.
40. My ROI is higher on ignoring DMs than joining MLMs.
41. Do I have to chant affirmations before breakfast?
I'm out.

42. I just joined a business that pays me in self-respect.
43. I'd rather be broke and peaceful than rich and Zoomed to death.
44. Your pitch gave my anxiety a side hustle.
45. I like opportunities that come without strings, hashtags, or pressure.
46. I only invest in snacks and chaos. Not this.
47. Unless this comes with a cat café and no meetings, I'm good.
48. I'm already overwhelmed by my to-do list and my existential crisis.
49. This feels like a timeshare pitch dressed as motivation.
50. If I wanted pressure and confusion, I'd just go on a blind date.

(...and continues through #100...)

Bonus Comeback #101

Do you offer a starter kit for saying no? I'm ready. 🙄

Outro: Use Responsibly (or Don't)

Look, saying “no” doesn't have to be boring. You can protect your time, your peace, and your sanity — and still have a laugh while doing it.

The next time someone slides into your DMs with the latest “ground floor opportunity,” pick one of these lines, deliver it with a straight face, and walk away a free human.

And if Karen blocks you? Consider that a win. 🏆

Stay cheeky, stay free.

– Dave

Copilot with Dave ✈️